His horse leaped into the square, not instantly fell dead, crushing down his rider, and breaking his sword as he fell amid the broken ranks of the enemy. Lieutenant Moore speedily extricated himself, and attempted with his broken sword to force his way through the press; but he would assuredly have lost his life had not the gallant young Lieutenant Malcolmson, observing his peril, fought his way to his dismounted comrade through a crowd of enemies to his rescue, and, giving him his stirrup, safely carried him through everything out of the throng. The thoughtfulness for others, cool determination, devoted courage and ready activity shown in extreme danger by this young Officer, Lieutenant Malcolmson, appear to have been most admirable, and to be worthy of the highest honour." Major General Tombs, CB, VC, the Officer in command at the time, reports that a party of the enemy, from 180 to 200 in number, had barricaded themselves in the Blockhouse in question, which they continued to defend after the rest of the position had been carried and the main body was in retreat. The Blockhouse, which was a phopolei, was the key to the enemy's position. Seeing no other means of storming the party near, and being anxious that the place should be taken immediately, as any protracted resistance might have caused the main body of the Bhootens to rally, the British Force having been fighting in a broiling sun on very steep and difficult ground for upwards of three hours, the General in command ordered the two Officers (Captain Trevor and Lieut. J. Dunlop, R. Engineers (since dead)) to show the way into the Blockhouse. They had to climb up a wall which was fourteen feet high, and then to enter a house, occupied by 200 desperate men, head foremost through an opening not more than two feet wide between the top of the wall and the roof of the Blockhouse. Major General Tombs states that on speaking to the Sikh soldiers around the wall, and telling them the way, when they followed with the wall, none of them responded to the call until these two Officers had shown them the way, when they followed with the greatest alacrity. Both of them were wounded."

The Officer commanded the troops on the occasion reports: 'About an hour later in the day, Dr. Douglas, and Batches, 24th Regiment, and four privates started, gallantly mounting the second day, made their way to the surf, almost to the shore, but finding their boat was half-filled with water, they retired. A second attempt made by Dr. Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boat outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boats.' It is stated that Dr. Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat, and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of everyday life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that seventeen officers and men were thus saved from what would otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not a certainty of death."
